Union City Launches Community Champions Initiative to Reclaim, Renew, and Reimagine Opportunity for Youth and Families

Join Georgia's Fastest-Growing City as we create pathways for Union City's youth and families.

Union City, GA: On Friday, August 15, at 2:00 PM, Mayor Vince R. Williams and the City Council will proudly unveil the Union City Community Champions Initiative. This bold new effort aims to create pathways for Union City's youth and to retool adults, families, and justice-impacted residents to help them thrive. The launch event will take place at the Kenneth L. Johnson Depot, located at 5061 Union Street, just steps away from City Hall.

The Community Champions Initiative supports Union City's long-term Master Plan mission to reclaim, renew, and reimagine the future. This involves reclaiming lives that have been marginalized, renewing access to resources and opportunities, and reimagining what is possible for every Union City resident.

Grounded in compassion, opportunity, and equity, the initiative will unite local businesses, educational institutions, faith-based leaders, judicial leadership, and community advocates to create a clear and actionable path toward economic mobility, job readiness, and personal restoration.

"This is about more than just jobs," said Mayor Williams. "It's about changing lives and creating sustainable pathways to success through education, employment, and empowerment. The Council and I are proud to launch this initiative as part of our commitment to reclaiming lost potential, renewing hope, and reimagining what our community can achieve together."

What It Offers:

- Career opportunities for youth ages 16–24
- Flexible full-time and part-time jobs
- Support for individuals facing barriers such as criminal records or homelessness
- Career training, mentorship, and wraparound services

- Entry into high-demand industries including tech, healthcare, logistics, and construction

Attendees will be invited to complete a short interest form to begin their personalized journey toward long-term success.

Union City extends special thanks to The Beatty Team for their passion and commitment to making this initiative a reality.
